Mr. Christopher Baba

Dear Mr. Baba:

Thank you for writing to the U.S. Department of Justice. We have been asked to respond to you. The Department of Justice cannot render private legal advice.

Your complaint relates to the conduct of a federal judge. The authority of the Department of Justice to review matters involving the decisions and actions of federal judges is limited. Absent evidence of federal criminal conduct, we are unable to act, even though the conduct complained of may appear to be arbitrary, unfair, or even illegal.

The complaint process is not intended to address complaints related to the merits of a case or a court's decision. Any person alleging that a judge of the United States has engaged in conduct prejudicial to the effective and expeditious administration of the business of the courts, or that such officer cannot discharge all the duties of the office because of physical or mental disability, may file a complaint with the clerk of the court of appeals for that circuit or applicable national court. The statute governing this complaint mechanism is set out at Title 28, U.S. Code, Section 351(a). Each circuit court of appeals web site has information about how to file a complaint in that circuit.

You may also wish to obtain on your own the advice of a private attorney to determine what, if any, civil remedies are available to you. You should be aware that the law imposes strict time limits, known as statutes of limitation, within which lawsuits or causes of action must be asserted in court. If you wish to seek legal redress you should not delay in doing so. You can find additional information on legal services and attorneys in your state through the American Bar Association. Its website is www.americanbarassociation.org.

Again, thank you for writing the Department of Justice.

Sincerely,
